entrepreneur Michael Macmillan is preparing the first crewed mission to the Red Planet, with a seat reserved for an ordinary person willing to do something extraordinary.

Disillusioned with her life, Faye Banks secretly enters the Seat 25 competition, never expecting to win. But when the dangerous one way trip becomes a reality, Faye faces an agonizing decision. With days to decide and her husband Jim announcing he wants children, Faye negotiates difficult relationships with her Father and Step-Mother whilst striking up an unexpected friendship with Teodor, a disenfranchised work colleague she has recently made redundant. As Faye observes the people around her and how different the world they inhabit is from the life she wants for herself, she finds the resolve to take the biggest risk imaginable and prove that even someone living the most ordinary of lives is capable of doing something extraordinary.
