

The Age of Adulthood

Sex, drugs and rock n' roll in the city of rain

Logline: A group of friends in their late 20s confront the acute disillusionment of early adulthood when their career aspirations and romantic relationships aren't what they dreamed they'd be.

Jason is an almost-famous actor with an agent in LA, but instead of pushing through when he's on the verge of something bigger, he quits. Then he breaks up with his long-term girlfriend, Abigail. Is it an existential reckoning or self-sabotage? He certainly has a lot of theories about life, the world and living in Vancouver that he's constantly telling his friends. Except everyone else in the tightly-knit circle is also dealing with their own private crises of faith, questioning and regrets.

The friends come together to celebrate Jason's birthday, and the evening spirals out of control in a drug and alcohol-fueled haze. Afterwards everyone in the group must deal with the fallout from that night, and find a way to move past their feelings of guilt, betrayal or disappointment, in order to find a way forward.

And yet a sense of direction continues to elude them all. Jason and Blake, his best friend from childhood, crash at Seth's place, which becomes a hub of discontent. Seth, a former stock-broker turned yogi, struggles to maintain control of the house, and his temper. And Woodrow, a drug-dealer with connections to the darkest corners of the city, keeps showing up to get high and play videogames. Preoccupied with the problems in their own lives, the friends fail to notice or intervene as Blake's drug use intensifies and Jason's teenage sister Chelsea gets involved with amateur porn.

To Jason's irritation, his friend Doug starts making a day-in-the-life documentary as a means to escape his pregnant fiance Sue, and a job he hates. Doug declares Jason the star of the film, because Jason is the most famous person he knows, and Jason begrudgingly agrees.

As Jason's ex, Abigail, struggles to get over him, Jason tries to move on by sleeping with Jill, Seth's ex. He also tries to connect with Kyla, a woman outside their social circle, who might be the stable influence Jason needs. Except she's lukewarm on him, especially as his friends, and Doug's film footage, reveal truths Jason would rather be kept hidden.

With the group's everyday dramas under the scrutiny of the cameras, conflicts deepen. Jason is forced to confront his friends, and worse, himself. The once close group appears to scatter, damaged beyond repair, until a shocking event unites them in grief to re-evaluate their lives and the decisions that led them adrift.

Half page

Jason is an almost-famous actor with an agent in LA, but instead of pushing through, he quits. Then he breaks up with his girlfriend, Abigail. Is it an existential reckoning or self-sabotage? He certainly has a lot of theories about life, the world and Vancouver.

When Jason's friends celebrate his birthday, things spiral out of control in a drug and alcohol-fueled haze. Afterwards everyone in the group must find a way to move past their feelings of guilt, betrayal or disappointment from that night.

Jason and Blake, his best friend from childhood, crash at Seth's place, which becomes a hub of discontent. Seth, a former stock-broker turned yogi, struggles to maintain control of the house, and his temper. And Woodrow, a drug-dealer with connections to the darkest corners of the city, keeps showing up to get high and play videogames. Preoccupied with their own problems, the friends fail to notice as Blake's drug use intensifies and Jason's teenage sister Chelsea gets involved with amateur porn.

To Jason's irritation, his friend Doug starts making a day-in-the-life documentary and declares Jason the star. Meanwhile, Jason tries to connect with Kyla, who might be the stable influence he needs. But then Doug's film footage reveals truths Jason would rather be kept hidden.

Under the scrutiny of the cameras, Jason is forced to confront his friends, and worse, himself. The once close group appears damaged beyond repair, until a shocking event unites them in grief to re-evaluate their lives.

500-character

Jason is an almost-famous actor with an agent in LA, a girlfriend and a close circle of friends. And then he quits acting.

He celebrates his birthday in a drug and alcohol fueled haze, breaks up with his girlfriend and crashes at his friend Seth's. When his friend Doug starts making a documentary about him, the footage reveals truths Jason would rather be kept hidden.

Under the scrutiny of the cameras, Jason is forced to confront his friends, and worse, himself. The once close group appears damaged beyond repair, until a shocking event unites them in grief to re-evaluate their lives.

400-character

Jason is an almost-famous actor with an agent in LA, a girlfriend and a close circle of friends. And then he quits acting.

When his friend Doug starts making a documentary about him, the footage reveals truths Jason would rather be kept hidden.

Under the scrutiny of the cameras, Jason is forced to confront his friends, and worse, himself. The once close group appears damaged beyond repair, until a shocking event unites them in grief to re-evaluate their lives.

250-character

Jason is an almost-famous actor with an agent in LA, and a close social circle. And then he quits acting. In the haze that follows, he and his friends each become preoccupied with their own disillusionment and drift apart, until a shocking even forces them to re-evaluate their lives.

90-character

Friends in their late 20s are disillusioned when their careers and relationships aren't what they dreamed.