

RED ROVER SYNOPSIS

LOGLINE LINE

After feeling he has nothing left to live for on earth, a lonely geologist tries to qualify for a one-way mission to Mars with the help of an offbeat musician who is just as lost as he is.

SHORT SYNOPSIS

Damon (Kristian Bruun) spends his waking hours searching for that elusive something. Whether it's for deeper meaning, love, or just "treasure" on the beach with his metal detector, but to no avail. So when Damon meets an offbeat musician named Phoebe (Cara Gee) handing out flyers for a one way trip to Mars, a bond quickly forms. She's going to help him find that thing he is looking for by sending him 33.9 million miles away, even though what he needs might be right in front of him.

LONG SYNOPSIS

Damon needs a change. He resides in the basement apartment of the house he co-owns with his ex girlfriend. She lives upstairs with her new beau, an Australian nightmare. They want to buy him out, it's time.

Damon needs a job. He was a highly valued geologist working for a mining investment firm, but he's lost his mojo for this uber macho work place and is let go for insisting on a cautious approach to things.

So when Damon meets Phoebe an offbeat musician making some extra money handing out flyers for a Mars project, "Red Rover", his life takes an unexpected turn. Albeit a desperately needed one.

The Red Rover application process, which similar to the real-life "Mars-One" project, is more about going viral than science, and this puts Damon at a loss. When Phoebe agrees to help him with his application a bond is quickly formed between two heart-broken cast-offs. However, getting closer to Phoebe puts his desire to leave at risk, even though her help increases his chances at being chosen.

LONG SYNOPSIS

Damon's in a bit of a rut. He works a passionless job for a boss who doesn't appreciate him. He lives in the basement of the house his ex-girlfriend and he still own together where he listens to her have passion filled, tantric sex with her new Australian boyfriend over and over and he spends countless, lonely hours on the beach with his metal detector searching for something he'll seemingly never find. Finally, when he gets unceremoniously fired and his ex offers to buy him out, he feels as if there is nothing left for him on Earth.

So when Damon meets Phoebe, a woman dressed as an astronaut handing out flyers for "Red Rover", a one way trip to begin life on Mars, his life takes an unexpected turn. All he has to do is be one of the few people selected from thousands of applicants around the world. Thing is, getting picked is more about winning an online popularity contest than actually being qualified, so Phoebe agrees to help him create the ultimate application video.

A bond quickly forms between these two lost souls, complicating Damon's reasoning for going through with this. 33.9 million miles is a long way to go to find what you need when it's right in front of you.
