

Tagline

In the heart of the Alps, a father and son collide with both nature and each other.

Logline

In this existential adventure, Rein, a young snowboard teacher who works in the Alps, receives a visit from his father Gijs from the Netherlands. They venture together into the snowy mountains where they collide head-on, both with the overwhelming nature surrounding them and also with each other.

Short synopsis

---

After his mother's death, Rein moves to a quiet Alpine village to find peace as a snowboard instructor. His tranquil life is disrupted when his extroverted father, Gijs, visits and dominates his life, creating tension between them. As they venture further into dangerous terrain, their personal conflict escalates into a fight for survival.

Long synopsis

After his mother passed away, Rein (31) moves to a small village in the Alps to be in nature, meditate and work as a snowboard teacher. His quiet bubble bursts when his extroverted father Gijs (60) comes to visit. Gijs quickly takes center stage on a back country ski tour with Rein and his friends. He charms the youngsters and flirts with Rein's new girlfriend Laura, leaving no room for his son. It isn't long before Rein has had enough. He drags his father away from the group and they continue their hike up the mountain alone. The tension between the two men is palpable. Gijs feels increasingly uncomfortable with the steep and dangerous terrain but Rein presses on to the top, ignoring his father's pleas to walk back down. It isn't long before nature violently lashes out, turning their petty struggle for dominance into a full-blown quest for survival.
