With a $5 million incentive, they put their differences aside. However, they will need to keep their emotions in check if they want to get paid - assuming they don't kill each other first.

Former partners in crime, Nico (Casper Van Dien) and Rick (Sean Patrick Flanery) used to be unstoppable Fixers and Hitmen working for Benjamin Rothstein. But their partnership shattered when Nico had an affair with Rick's fiancée, Rachel. Now, years later, a new crime lord, Sunny Gill (Parmish Verma), has emerged, dominating the criminal world. Sunny has a history with Benjamin, and the latter sees a chance for revenge when he learns about Sunny's dealings with the Evgeny brothers, top Russian gangsters.

Reluctantly, Benjamin persuades Nico and Rick to reunite for this mission, despite their animosity. With a $5 million incentive, they put their differences aside. Rick also has an old score to settle with Sunny, this is his underlying motive. As they dig deeper into Sunny's collaboration with the Evgeny brothers, old resentments resurface, straining their partnership.

The plot becomes more complex when they discover that a banker named Treyton Jones is coerced into helping Sunny and the Evgeny brothers transfer large sums of money to the Middle East after they kidnap his daughter, Emma.

Despite their disagreements, Nico and Rick prove their competence time and time again, increasing their chances of success. However, they need to keep their tempers in check if they want to complete their mission—assuming they don't kill each other first.
