

OLD GUYS IN BED

Logline

A gay film historian, new to online dating, enlists his teenage niece to help him navigate the uncharted waters of the digital world, in pursuit of the 70-year-old man of his dreams.

Short Synopsis

Paul, a 60-year-old film historian, meets 70-year-old Bill on a dating site. Unfamiliar with these new ways of connecting, he discovers a world that is both promising and challenging. Fortunately, Paul can count on the help of his niece, who tries to guide him through this modern and unpredictable journey of love.

Long Synopsis

Paul, a 60-year-old film historian, meets Bill, 70, on a dating site. New to this digital world of intimacy, Paul steps into a landscape that feels both promising and challenging. What is meant to bring people together also comes with longing and quiet fears.

Bill offers warmth, tenderness, and amazing sex — a rediscovery Paul had quietly stopped believing in. Their growing connection is shaped by time, memory, and unexpected depth.

Paul's niece becomes his guide through the intricacies of online dating and helps him face the vulnerability that surfaces when love arrives later in life.

Written and directed by JP Bergeron, Old Guys in Bed explores a part of queer experience rarely shown on screen: the passion and closeness that endure between aging men. With sensitivity and candor, it celebrates the beauty of age, the resilience of affection, and the courage it takes to open one's heart — wrinkles and all.
